Animal & Farm Educational Workshops

Friday 2 – 6:30 PM: Integrated Parasite Control and FAMACHA

Instructor: Anne Zajac, DVM

Anne Zajac, DVM, Ph.D. is a professor at VMRCVM and is a member of the Southern Consortium for Small Ruminant Parasite Control (SCSRPC). There is always a lot to learn about parasite diagnosis and control. Space is limited and pre-registration is required. EAGMA member fee is $15.00 (non-member $25) plus the cost of the FAMACHA chart if you choose to purchase one (TBA).

Saturday 9-10 AM: Farm Management for Raising Goats on Pasture

Instructor: Dr. Ken Turner

Ken Turner, Ph. D. is a research animal scientist and Supervisory Lead Scientist at the USDA Agricultural Research Service. This talk includes a discussion about bioactive forages and other considerations for GI parasite control in small ruminants. Consider this part II of the Friday IPC/FAMACHA lecture. Free.

Saturday 10-11 AM: Ask the Experts

Panelists: Judge Justin Stieler, Dr. Ken Turner, Dr. Melinda McCall, moderated by John Frett (EAGMA)

This is your chance to ask questions and discuss what concerns you have about raising Angora goats. Learn from others' experiences and share your own. Free.

Saturday 11:30 AM – 4 PM: Ask the Veterinarian

Instructor: Melinda McCall, DVM

Dr. McCall is offering one-on-one consultative sessions to discuss your particular concerns and questions about raising Angora goats. Sign up at the show for a 15-minute, hands-on session. Free.

Fiber Arts Educational Workshop

Saturday 9:30 AM – 12:30 PM: Dyeing with Natural Dyes

Instructor: Phylleri Ball

Students will dye yarn with a variety of natural dyes. We will work with local plants as well as purchased dye like Cochineal. We will explore both casual dyeing - throw it in a pot and see what happens - as well as measured recipes. Handouts with dye recipes are included. Commercial yarn for dyeing will be provided. Class fee is $40 plus materials of $15. Pre-registration is required.
